DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Henry Coonrod House is located on the northeast side of Chestnut Grove Road approximately .3 mile north of its junction with Walnut Bottom Road and .2 mile south of Folly Run, a tributary of the North Branch of the Potomac River. The site includes a dwelling, a privy, a springhouse, a coal shed, a shop, and a small barn.

The house is a two story ell plan with a shallowly pitched gable roof and a dry laid stone foundation. Its vertical plank construction is covered with German siding and cornerboards on the exterior. The entrance facade is located on the southwest side of the ell where a shed-roofed porch supported by three turned posts shelters it and continues around to the southeast elevation of the main block. Another shed-roofed porch extends across the northeast elevation of the rear wing. The main block is lit by two over two sash windows with plain board surrounds; the wing is lit by two over two sash on the first floor only and by two-pane, hinged windows on the second floor. The roof is covered with asphalt roll roofing and has a metal stove pipe emerging from the rear wing on the northeast side of the ridgeline.

A frame, gable-roofed springhouse on a dry laid stone foundation is located approximately 15 feet northeast of the house. The privy stands east of the house and the coal house and shop, both frame, lie to the southwest. The barn, a small frame, gable-roofed building on stone footings, sits by the road.
